

Dr. Harry Winfield Taylor

December 10, 1921 - January 26, 2015

Dr. Harry Taylor, 93, passed away peacefully on Monday January 26, 2014 at the Brooks-Howell Home in Asheville, NC.

Harry was born in Zanesville, Ohio on December 10, 1921 to Clara Naomi and Harry Winfield Taylor, Sr. He lived in Zanesville until he went off to college at Washington and Jefferson College in Washington, PA in 1939. After graduation, Harry went into the US Army in 1942 and while in the Army, he went to medical school at Temple University in Philadelphia. Harry married Mary Ellen Warren in 1945 and they remained happily married until her death in 2013. He also graduated from medical school in 1945 and then spent a number of years working at several VA hospitals and doing his residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology. After a fellowship at Jefferson, Harry moved his family to Woodstown, New Jersey in 1954.

For the next 30 years, he practiced medicine in Salem, Pennsville and eventually in Wilmington, Delaware delivering many of the people who live here today. He taught at Wilmington General Hospital and taught at Jefferson Medical School. In 1960 Harry and Mary Ellen built a home in Laurel Hills and this is where they raised their family. In 2014 Harry moved into assisted living in Asheville, North Carolina. During the short time he was there, his sweet and loving nature endeared him to both staff and residents alike.

Harry was a man of many skills and interests. He created family rooms in the basement of every house he owned. His interests involved photography, history, politics, philosophy and science. At the age of 93, he could still quote the complete Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. He volunteered at his granddaughters' elementary school helping young children learn to read. In 2010 and 2011, pictures he took of his hometown while growing up and later edited, were shown at the Zanesville Art Center.

Harry is survived by three daughters; Pamela Taylor Kotler of Lincoln, CA, Wende Taylor Sima (Victor) of Woodbury and Alicia Taylor Helgeson (David) of Asheville, NC. He is also survived by seven grandchildren, Joshua, Jenny, Victor, Adam, Jesse, Rachel and Taylor.

Family and friends are welcomed for a memorial service to celebrate Dr. Harry Taylor at the Woodstown Friends Meeting House, “ Working with Dr. Taylor was always a joy and delight each and every day. He delivered our first child before his retirement. He was kind, gentle and always willing to listen. Thus far he was the best employer and doctor. Surely missed.
