He later attended Georgia Southern College before transferring to the University of Georgia, where he graduated with a Bachelor of Business Administration in 1950. He was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity, where he served as Vice President, and was also a student council member.

After graduation, he served in the United States Army during the Korean War and attained the rank of Master Sergeant before being discharged. He then returned to the University of Georgia to attend graduate school, earning his Master of Business Administration degree in 1956.

Following his graduate studies, he was employed by Price Waterhouse in Atlanta for two years. He then returned to Statesboro and joined his family's wholesale food distribution business, the T.J. Morris Company, eventually becoming the President, CEO, and Chairman of the Board. He also served on the Board of Governors of the National Owners Wholesale Grocers Association.

Active in civic, religious, and community affairs, Jimmy served as President and Chairman of the Statesboro Rotary Club, President of the Statesboro Chamber of Commerce, President and Chairman of the Forest Heights Country Club, and Vice Chairman of the Board of Deacons of the Statesboro First Baptist Church.
